The President asked what the Prime Minister thought of Austria's desire for membership in the EC. (C)

Prime Minister Thatcher (b) (1)

The President asked the Prime Minister for her views on the Middle East. He said the visits of Middle Eastern leaders to Washington had gone well. The Shamir visit went better than the President had expected, but (b) (1)

(b) (1)

The President was not too optimistic. On Lebanon, the President was really depressed. It was an awful situation and the President felt emotionally involved. Things used to work there. (b) (1)

Prime Minister Thatcher (b) (1)

The President raised the issue of American and British hostages in Lebanon. (C)

SECRET
The President praised the role of the Prime Minister. (U)
Prime Minister Thatcher (b)(1)

The Prime Minister commented that Ambassador Acland would stay in Washington for another year, until 1991.

The Prime Minister said she would be going to the next meeting of the International Democratic Union and asked if it was true that Vice President Quayle might be the next chairman of the IDU.

The President was embarrassed to say he had not heard that. The U.S. had an internal problem with the IDU, since the Democrats wanted to be part of it rather than be in the Socialist International. But the President would look into the question and would be pleased about the Vice President assuming the chairmanship.

Prime Minister Thatcher (b)(1)

The President said he had thought of asking President Reagan to go to the Tokyo meeting.

The President, after a brief discussion of the environment, commented on the Strategic Defense Initiative, saying he could not take SDI away.

Prime Minister Thatcher (b)(1) asked if the U.S. was contemplating holding an international conference on global warming.

The President said he was worried that there were too many conferences.
