THE PRESIDENT HAS SEEN
1-25-91

Dear President Saddam Hussein:

We are living in difficult times. The failure of dialogue has brought violence and pain to all of us, and we pray for peace for our nation and yours, and for the whole world.

I reflect upon our long conversations and those with Foreign Minister Aziz. The worst scenario has emerged with bombs dropping, people dying, and world destabilization ensuing. When I was in Baghdad and you responded to my appeal to let foreigners return home, it gave the world some hope. The return of other foreigners over the next months continued to feed this hope. This hope must not be allowed to die, especially at a critical time such as this.

I appeal to you even in this time of war and violence not to let the doors of dialogue and humanitarianism close. I urge you to turn the prisoners of war into an opportunity for peace. As you know, the media has reported that you would use prisoners of war as human shields. You have said that you would not. The 1949 Geneva Conventions are a cornerstone of international law, and we urge all our world leaders to respect and adhere to them. But I hope that you would take an even bolder measure, and release the prisoners of war. Adherence to the Geneva Conventions and an announcement of Iraq's intention to release these prisoners would be a tremendous step in aiding the world in seeking a negotiated solution.

In these terrible times, we must remind ourselves and each other that a common humanity unites us. Now is the time to display the courage and strength to challenge the world to measure human rights by one yardstick. You did so only weeks ago when you released the foreign nationals.

As the crisis has escalated, such a gesture is now even more valuable and necessary.

Sincerely,

Reverend Jesse L. Jackson
