Dear Mr. Chairman:

The President and I fully share your concerns about the current situation in Iraq which you enumerated in your letter of April 14, 1992. As we have said publicly on many occasions, United States policy toward Iraq seeks to maintain international sanctions until there is a change in leadership in Baghdad and a new government prepared to live at peace both with Iraq's neighbors and with the Iraqi people. We fully support United Nations Security Council Resolution 688 which calls on Iraq to cease repression of all Iraqi citizens.

As you noted, the coalition's Provide Comfort air cover has been critical to preventing an Iraqi attack on the areas of northern Iraq under Kurdish control. We are proud of the role coalition forces have played in curtailing the suffering of the population of northern Iraq. Let me assure you that we and our allies in Operation Provide Comfort have already begun consultations on extending the mandate for the presence with the Turkish leadership.

Our concern about the suffering of the Iraqi people naturally extends to the Shia population of the south as well. We have been engaged in a dialogue with the United Nations about expanding the U.N. presence in that area for some time and will continue to do so.

Sincerely,

Brent Scowcroft

Dear Mr. President:

We are writing to express our deep concern over the current situation in Iraq, particularly regarding the safety of the Kurds in northern Iraq and the Shi'a muslims in southern Iraq.

Recently, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee held a hearing to receive testimony on mass killings in Iraq under the Saddam Hussein regime. The Committee heard graphic and convincing reports of indiscriminate killings of Iraqi Kurdish civilians, particularly during the past several years. The testimony, based on official Iraqi documents and on tests conducted by forensic specialists, confirms the Committee's own research in this area. The available evidence suggests that the total number of Iraqi Kurdish deaths and disappearances may be as high as 200,000 to 300,000, or roughly 5 percent of the Iraqi Kurdish population. This information indicates that Iraqi actions against the Kurds are tantamount to an official policy of genocide.

The Kurds have effectively established a liberated zone in most of the traditionally Kurdish areas of northern Iraq. However, it is only the threat of allied military retaliation that protects this liberated zone from renewed Iraqi attack. And, from what we know, a renewed attack threatens the Kurdish people with extermination.

We therefore strongly support an extension of allied air cover under Operation Provide Comfort, currently set to expire at the end of June. We also hope the United States will urge the government of Turkey--whose support is a critical element of Operation Provide Comfort's success--to support an extension of the mandate.

In addition, we hope that the United States will make an effort to address the situation of the Shi'a population in Iraq. While the plight of the Kurds is becoming increasingly prominent, relatively little attention has been paid to the fate of the 13,000,000 Shi'a muslims who have struggled under Saddam Hussein's rule. Last year, following the uprising in the south, many of the Shi'a combatants, their civilian supporters, and Iraqi army deserters were forced into the southeastern marshlands at the confluence of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers. There they have been subject to harsh retribution from Iraqi forces, leading to numerous deaths and causing serious refugee problems. Accordingly, we would urge the United States to examine possibilities for expanding the United Nations' presence in southern Iraq and extending appropriate international protection to the Shi'a.

We appreciate your attention to these matters.
